House Passes Rep. Labriola Bill to Protect Sporting Officials

The House of Representatives today approved legislation introduced by State Rep. David Labriola, R-131st, designed to protect sports officials in Connecticut. House Bill 5222, An Act Concerning The Assault Of A Sports Official, now goes to the State Senate for consideration.

Under HB 5222, the state would establish a separate crime for assault of a sports official. This crime would be defined as causing physical injury to a sports official and/or intending to intimidate, harass, or retaliate against the sports official because of his or her officiating duties. The bill would make this crime a class D felony punishable by one to five years in prison, a fine of up to $5,000, or both.

Sports officials that would be protected under the legislation include any person who officiates or enforces the rules at an amateur sporting or athletic event such as umpires, referees, judges, timekeepers and scorers. According the non-partisan Office of Legislative Research (OLR), under current law, there are a number of different assault crimes with penalties ranging from a class A misdemeanor to a class B felony depending on the severity of the harm and the circumstances of the crime.

“Today we send a strong message to angry fans at sporting events; “Don’t even think about it,” said Rep. Labriola. “We join numerous other states in protecting our sports officials.”

The Connecticut Interscholastic Athletic Conference (CIAC) has publicly supported HB 5222. CIAC serves as the sole governing body for inter-scholastic athletic activities in Connecticut.

“This is certainly legislation that is overdue,” said Michael Savage, executive director of the CIAC. “We are absolutely delighted that it passed the House. We need the protections the bill would provide, since there has been an increase in assaults against officials during the past few years and a number of them have chosen not to continue officiating because of exposure to these type of incidents.”
